SKYSCAPES
(VI ONWARDS)

by Teri Walsh

I moved to Eastbourne in 2009 and have an amazing view over the English Channel from the back of my house. Since that time I have taken about four thousand digital photographs of the sky (showing dawns, cloud formations and night-time views).

In 2016 I started using these photographs as source material with the aim of creating a series of work (in a similar way to The Crow, Trees & Roots and Lines). At that time I made four etchings and one monotype. I returned to working on Skyscapes in 2022 making screen monoprints in the Volcanic Editions studio in Brighton.

This process involves a very different approach to both the subject matter and the process of screenprinting itself. Gone is the analytical, logical approach to building up images using complex combinations of hand, stencil and photographic positives. Instead there may be merged backgrounds followed by ink and paste being applied by brush, sponge etc. onto an open screen and then hand-pulled. This process is repeated as many times as necessary until I feel the image is finished. In some cases the image is then overprinted with a further blend or a transparent layer. I intend continuing to work in this manner / on this series for the foreseeable future.
